Q: Shell script, mplayer remove stop start command I have a shell script which start and stop a mplayer process using command `mplayer -af joy.wav -1 -vvv` I want to remove the `-1` to force a stop. How to do it? I tried a `-s` command, but then mplayer did not stop the process.

A: Since you tagged this as bash, use the `-n` option, which tells the shell to run only the commands in the script without executing them. `mplayer -af joy.wav -n`

If you want to do the stop without a bit of redirection, then you need to run the mplayer command directly:

mplayer -af joy.wav -n & sleep 5 kill $!

If you actually want to stop the program, you can just kill it: `mplayer -af joy.wav -n & sleep 5 kill $!`

However, this will not work if you launch it with a shell script. Increasing evaluation of the quality of medical care: the need for new quality indicators. The new quality indicators described in this article will be used to evaluate the quality of medical care that is provided in the future. By creating a framework on the basis of evidence, these indicators also show where and which factors have the biggest impact on quality of care. The best indicators for the important issues of effectiveness, efficiency, equity, information and satisfaction are currently being developed. The future quality of care will depend on improving the quality of health care in terms of the four elements and the underlying causes. Increasingly, the health care sector is pressured by all stakeholders, not just patients. The quality of health care is valued
