What's New In InnoEx?

A portable app for managing Inno Setup installers. It needs to be emphasized right from the get-go that this application is a portable one and that it does not need to be installed on your computer in order to run without any glitches. Moreover, InnoEx already comes packed with a version of Innounp, so you do not need to download, install or configure any additional software, as every function is bound to run smoothly. Explore and extract Inno Setup objects In order to benefit from the functions of this app, you only need to access the app, then add the installer you want to process (you can either navigate to its location or you can simply drag and drop it onto the main window). Next, you can just go ahead and browse through all the displayed installer resources, while also getting the chance to extract one or several of them. You can also view the contents of a selected record using the internal viewer or a custom one, as configured by you beforehand. 2 Comments For This Post The InnoEx screenshots don't show any GUI elements, they just show the icons and toolbars at the top, and the path to the installer on the right. In other words, they show a blank screen. Yeah, I don't think they're compatible with Mac OS. There is no hope for a Mac version as they simply don't support that. It's just a feature - basically, InnoEx is not intended to be a full featured GUI tool, just a command line utility. As far as I know, Innounp is not Mac/Linux/etc compatible, you can use it from the command line, but there isn't a GUI version of it yet. If it helps, I have an ongoing project, maybe I can finish it in time. Just to clarify - InnoEx is portable, it has its own portable Innounp binary, so it is not a "portable" installer, but the Innounp binaries I provide on Innounp.org (binary installer) are portable. It's not possible to make it universal, because of the "universal" certification issue. I never said it was a GUI tool - Innounp is a GUI tool, it has the GUI layer built on top of its command-line tool. The release version of InnoEx (1.2.9.8) is written in C#/VS2012, and Innounp is written in C++/VS2012, so they are of the same codebase. On the Mac, I don't have any personal Mac, I have only a MacBook Pro, but they don't support it. I really don't know if they're going to try to port it in the future. As for now, the Mac version of InnoEx just runs the executable file from
