[Influence of acoustic stimulation on the habituation of the neural generators of the electrically evoked long latency auditory evoked potentials (LLAEs) in guinea pigs]. The influence of electrical and acoustic stimulation on the habituation of the neural generators of the electrically evoked long latency auditory evoked potentials (LLAEs) was studied. Electrical stimulation of the primary auditory cortex resulted in a decrease of the amplitude of the LLAE responses as a function of repeated stimulation. At the end of the electrical stimulation period the habituation disappeared. Acoustic stimulation (white noise, 150 dB in the case of the acoustic stimulation, or click trains) at the end of the electrical stimulation period did not influence the habituation. These data suggest that habituation of the electrical evoked LLAEs may be due to certain kind of plasticity in the auditory cortex. Q: Convert all pages to HTTPS in WordPress I have a WordPress website which is also running some other scripts, so it has several pages, plus some other files. We only want to run the website on an HTTPS server. When we put the website into live, I expected the WordPress to run on an HTTPS host, instead it runs on HTTP. I know there are three ways to fix this problem: Update the WordPress files, including functions.php. Unfortunately, this requires us to upload the same files again, it cannot be just a quick operation. Update WordPress via the admin panel. As we host our website outside of the root of the website folder, this won't work. Use a redirect to the HTTPS version of the website. This will redirect HTTP requests to HTTPS. Unfortunately, we cannot change all the URLs to HTTPS, as there are hundreds of different URLs and some of them are dynamic. We could use mod_rewrite to rewrite all the requests, but this is very hard to write. Is there a way to make the WordPress website run on an HTTPS server without updating WordPress files? A: If you installed WordPress on a dedicated server and want to make it HTTPS, you'll need to have the SSL certificate installed and configured properly. To do this, you'll need to contact your hosting service provider to get the SSL certificate set up. Once you get the certificate installed and properly configured, there's no need to do anything

A report released by the Ministry of Health has revealed more than 40 percent of trial participants had developed post-traumatic stress disorder symptoms as a result of taking part. After testing more than 5,000 people involved in trials of blood tests for genetic diseases, the ministry found the rates of PTSD were even higher than that of victims of other natural disasters, and there were three times as many women showing PTSD symptoms compared to men. The Raine study, which followed the patients for 18 months, found the highest rate of PTSD, at 54 per cent, among women in the first five months, but it fell over time, with women in their 20s and 30s showing the highest rate of 9 per cent. The lowest rate of PTSD was among participants in the youngest age group - women aged under 20 - who showed no signs of the disorder, with only 1 per cent reported PTSD symptoms. Patients in their 60s and over were more likely to develop PTSD, with 10 per cent and 4 per cent of patients in the two oldest age groups reporting the symptoms. But the ministry said it did not have enough evidence to say why people in later age groups were more likely to suffer from PTSD. An expert in
