Q: SQL: how to construct this query This is my database: selecting the whole row only is easy. Now, if I want to select only the ID 1, I can do this: `SELECT * FROM mytable WHERE ID = 1`; But I want to select only the rows that have the `2_line_id = 1`. Do I need to do the following? `SELECT * FROM mytable WHERE 2_line_id = 1`; A: Try to be explicit about the joins. For instance: `select mytable.* from mytable left join mytable tt on tt.id = 2_line_id and tt.id = 1 where tt.id is null`; Note: I don't know what the keys are.

"Who Am I," "In My House" & "In The End" (iTunes Session) After posting a few of their hits from their new self-titled album "Who Am I", Andy Samberg and his Lonely Island cohorts sit in for an iTunes Session on their full-length "In My House", "One More Time" and "We Are Young". Samberg ends the session by singing his catchy, "In the End", which has become a fun ad-lib for the Samberg and Pigeonholed Crew lately. In full disclosure, I got a heads up about this by way of my friend, Ashley, who contacted me after reading that I was responsible for bringing Samberg to iTunes and who has been following his career for quite some time. I was thinking, "I love this song. What are we going to do with this?" Ashley told me we could have them play it over the phone, or send it to the studio for a full, uninterrupted version. I'm glad we did. If you missed it, check out the band's "Saturday
