ASCII Text Files Folder Search Routine is a freeware program which has been developed to search for the specified string of characters among multiple text documents inside a specified folder. It uses an advanced technology called Line matching that allows it to search for the target string in all of the specified text files at once. Nuvie Toolbar 2.3 Nuvie Toolbar 2.3a Nuvie Toolbar 2.3a is a small and lightweight tool which brings a useful set of features to its users. The application comes packed with many essential tools, and it allows users to handle their data more efficiently. Nuvie Toolbar 2.3a enables you to have quick access to all of your favorite Internet search engines, such as Google, Yahoo and Bing. It's also a robust text encoder with Unicode support, and it can also create HTML/XML files. More importantly, the user interface is designed with the minimalist aesthetic in mind, so you get a real sense of freedom while using this software. Download and install the app After the installation, the program will also install a default search engine and a default data encoder. Then, you can choose the search engine of your choice and use the search bar to type in any text string you want to find. Finally, you need to go to the Data Encoding tab to select the data encoder you want to use. Although the free version is OK for most uses, it's available for $9.95/year if you want to use the full version, which includes more search results, more encoders and more options. Evaluation and conclusion In our tests, the toolbar worked without any problems. It also maintained a high level of performance and did not create new entries in the Windows registry, so we think it's a neat tool for home users. However, we didn't try to compare its features with other similar apps, so we can't make any statements about the tool's pros and cons. 2 Freeware File Size: 1.3 MB
