A: Your issue lies in the prefix "ERP Maestro". The reason for the error "Error: unexpected EOF while parsing" is that there is a blank line in your file right before the delimiter (i.e. |). This is breaking a POSIX read() function (as opposed to the standard C++ read function, which doesn't care about such a thing). Therefore, instead of reading your file until the end, it just stops as soon as it gets to the first blank line. This is the source of your problem. In any case, you could easily check for these line breaks in your file by adding this code before your for loop: `std::string line; while (std::getline(f, line)) { // process the file line }` The "safe" way to do it would be to rewrite your file so that it is either a single line or a newline at the end. Q: How to include a file from classpath in a JSP file? For example, I have a file in classpath "A.xhtml". The contents of this file is hello How to include this file in a jsp page? A: Like this: `{pageScope.A.hello}` The `{pageScope.A.hello}` will be replaced with the value of hello. And yes, you may include an.xhtml file in your JSP like this: `{pageScope.A.hello}` A: To add to @dasblinkenlight's answer, `{pageScope.A.hello}` will be replaced by the value of hello. If you want to process the contents of the file at runtime, you can use `XmlWebApplicationContext` instead, like below.
`XmlWebApplicationContext wac = (XmlWebApplicationContext)
context.getApplicationContext(); String content = ""; Resource res = wac.getResource("classpath:A.xhtml"); File resource`
